

Ray's Corner – October 28, 2008

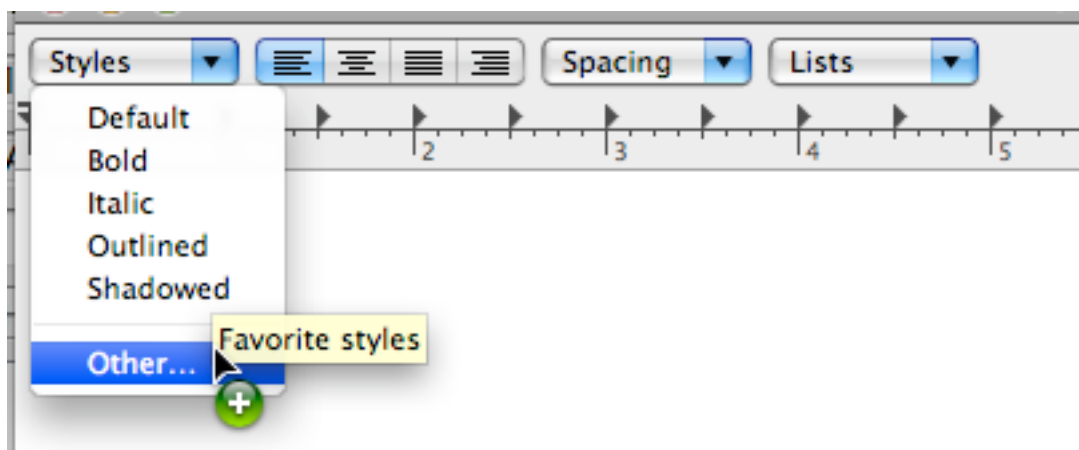

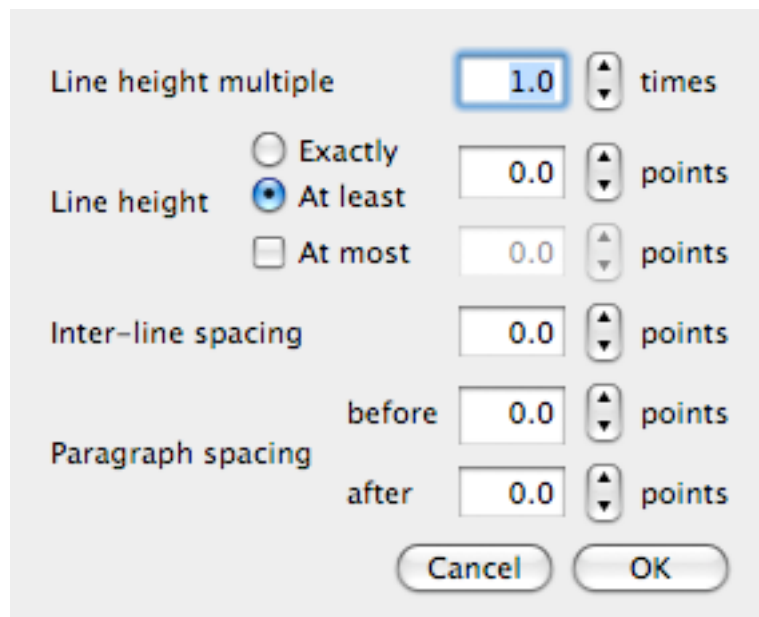

TextEdit is a very useful application for creating text documents. It is very easy to use. And, it has enough formatting capability for most of our members.

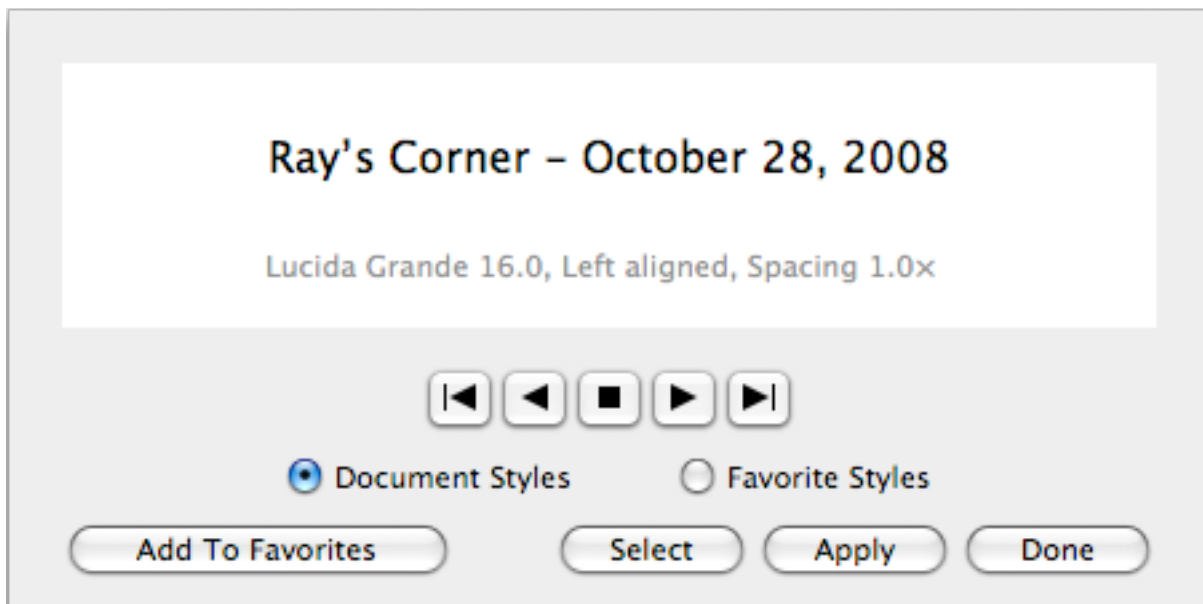

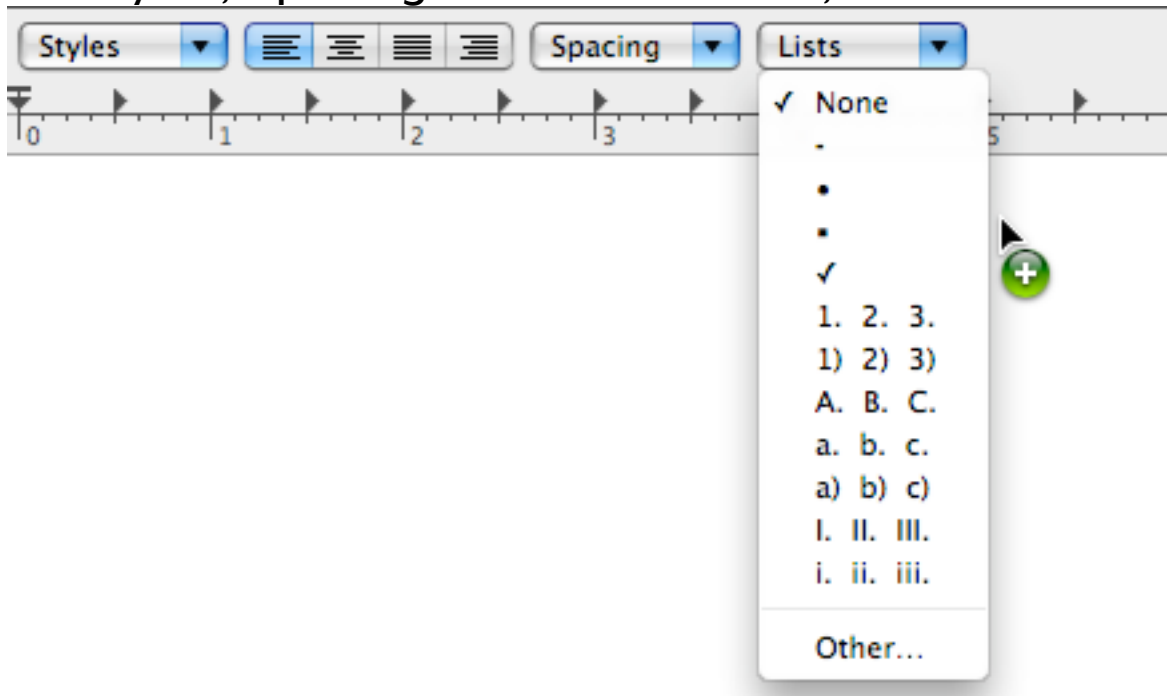

You can select some text in a your document, and try using different spacing settings.

When you click on the “other” selection, you are presented with several different options for formatting the document. As an example: this paragraph is set to double the line size; The style drop-down is set for shadowed.

Following are some examples of the controls available from TextEdit's Styles, Spacing and Lists Menus

Examples of the controls available from TextEdit's Styles, Spacing and Lists Menus, continued.

I believe that TextEdit is well worth some of you time to try out.